

PINCHOT SPEAKS AT G. O. P. RALLY IN NORRISTOWN

Says Corruption of Philadelphia Gang Gives State Bad Reputation

CHEAT AT ELECTIONS

Deals With Unemployment Situation in Talk Over The Radio

NORRISTOWN, Oct. 28.—Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for Governor, addressed a Montgomery county Republican rally here this afternoon.

"Coming into Montgomery county, I am coming among old friends," said Pinchot. "In 1922 it was the largest primary vote of Montgomery that assured me the nomination and in the general election Montgomery county gave me support that was all any Republican candidate could ask," he continued.

"In the present campaign the county organization is standing solidly behind the whole ticket. It is evident that Montgomery county has not been deceived, and that it realizes that a vote for Hemphill is a vote to put State Government into control of the corrupt Philadelphia Gang which has made the Philadelphia debt the heaviest per capita of all cities in America, and has so burdened its home owners with taxes that 1,400 sheriff sales occur every month.

"The corruption of the Philadelphia Gang has given the State of Pennsylvania a reputation which it does not deserve, and there is nothing more important to the good name of the State than to clean up election conditions in Philadelphia. Proof that the Philadelphia Gang cheats at elections has been supplied, and supplied overwhelmingly, time and time again. The fact that more than 122,000 errors were uncovered in the opening of 550 ballot boxes last summer amounts to a conclusive demonstration, especially when we remember that a great majority of these errors resulted to the advantage of the Philadelphia Gang.

"I do not propose to stand for this stealing of votes. If necessary I am prepared to go before the court and ask for the opening of every ballot box in Philadelphia. And I can assure the would-be ballot thieves that nothing will be left undone to put every man concerned with stealing votes in the coming election behind the bars where he belongs.

"Pennsylvania has been disgraced long enough by crooked registration, the theft of votes, and the general attempt to nullify the honest ballots of honest electors up the State for which the Philadelphia Gang is responsible. This is just as good a time as any other to stop it—and stop it short."

Pinchot yesterday spoke over Station KDKA.

"The biggest job we have before us today is to find jobs for the jobless," he said.

Continuing, the forester spoke as follows:

"When men and women whose very existence depends upon daily wages find themselves without steady work, or without any work at all, it is the duty of the State to put forth all its power to find work for them. That, in essence, is one of the oldest principles of the Republican Party.

"Jobless workers menace prosperity. If they cannot earn they cannot buy, and if they cannot buy they will soon put others out of jobs. All dinner palls must be full, or soon none of them will be full. That is one of the basic principles of the Roosevelt Republicanism, of which I am proud to call myself a disciple. In jobs as in anything else we cannot fall back on the cry, 'I am not my brother's keeper,' without injuring ourselves.

"Today there are thousands of Pennsylvania workers jobless through no fault of their own. It would be a mistake to say that 'hard times' are upon us, for such is not the case. In many lines prosperity, normal employment at good wages, still continues. The unemployment that does exist is the result of a depression which can be overcome, and it is our duty, with the State taking the leadership, to wipe out the unemployment and thus bring about a return of complete and general prosperity.

"It is my intention as Governor to use every last bit of executive power to accomplish that end. Through my own efforts, and those I am sure the Republican Legislature will be only too willing to give, we shall try to do everything that is humanly possible to open up jobs for every man and woman who is willing to work.

"Foreseeing that this problem of unemployment would be probably the most acute with which I would have to deal when I went to Harrisburg, I took steps almost immediately after I was assured that I had won the Republican nomination for Governor to work out a plan of action.

"To get the results that are needed, and that are possible, the Governor needs not only the assistance of the Governmental agencies which he directs, and the Legislative branch of the Government, but also of men and

MANY GUESTS ATTEND MANERA WEDDING

Ceremony Solemnized by Rev. Romagno in St. Ann's Church, Here

RECEPTION IS HELD

St. Ann's Catholic Church was the scene of a beautiful wedding yesterday afternoon at two o'clock when Miss Clara Dolores Manera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Manera, 423 Mill street, and Mr. Tully Mignogna, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mignogna, of Holmesburg, were united in marriage by the Rev. Father Marcellino Romagno, rector of the church.

The bride looked beautiful in a creation of white bridal satin and lace. The close-fitting satin bodice featured a round neck-line edged with lace and long lace sleeves. The skirt was quite long and over each hip was a panel of lace edged with tulle, which fell in graceful folds, reaching the edge of the dress. She wore white satin slippers and silk stockings. The bridal veil of tulle edged with lace, was cap-shaped and trimmed with pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of calla lilies, roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Thomas Wilson, Mill street, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and she was attractive in a close-fitting model of peach color satin with an over-dress of silk net of the same tone, made with a round neck-line, cap-shaped sleeves. The skirt was a bounce model. She wore a Greta Garbo horse-hair hat trimmed with maline, slippers and stockings, matching her gown, and carried a shower bouquet of peach color roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's attendants were Miss Erma Mignogna, sister of the groom, of Holmesburg; Miss Katharine Abraham, of Frankford; Miss Victoria Ureanski, of Cornwells Heights; Miss Mary DePalma, of Philadelphia; Miss Lucy DePalma, of Holmesburg; and Miss Anna Caruso, of Jefferson avenue. The attendants were attired in same style dresses, as the matron of honor. The tones were the pastel shades, each bridesmaid wearing a Greta Garbo hat, slippers and stockings to match their gown. Their shower bouquets alternated with chrysanthemums or roses, each of which had lilies of the valley entwined.

The best man was Mr. Sylvester, of Philadelphia, and the ushers were Mr. Mignogna, of Holmesburg, brother of the groom; William Manero, of Mill street, brother of the bride; Lewis Farina, of Minor street; Mike Cintino, of Holmesburg; and Arthur DePalma, of Holmesburg.

The little flower girls were: Rita DePalma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph DePalma, of Holmesburg; and Bella Stamponi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Stamponi. They were dressed in dainty frocks of white satin, with slippers and stockings to match and they wore bandeaus of orange blossoms. They carried baskets of small chrysanthemums and delphinium.

TO LECTURE HERE

who will lecture at the four sessions of the Courier's Cooking and Home-Makers' School which opens November 4th in St. James's Parish House.

COURIER'S COOKING SCHOOL WILL NOT BE DULL OR UNINTERESTING; EVERY SESSION FULL OF FUN AND INSTRUCTION

Opening of Big Four-Night Event is Being Eagerly Anticipated by the Women of Bristol and Vicinity—Women of Every Town in Lower Bucks County Are Invited to Attend.

The term "cooking school" may sound dull and uninteresting to the average feminine citizen of Bristol and vicinity, wherein the Courier circulates, that is if she has never attended a De Both Home Makers' School. It needs only one attendance to make of her pupil a De Both fan for life. To discover in a single evening a lot of fun, a lot of interest, the most deft of instruction and even a thrill or two—

The atmosphere of "school" is missing. From the moment Mrs. Katherine Delaney of the DeBoth Home Makers' Schools appears on her stage there is an instant feeling of expectancy. This may be due in part to her attractive personality, her quick and ready smile, as well as to the confidence she inspires in her thorough familiarity with the listeners' problems and training in how to meet them.

The first-time visitor needs only that first glance to know that this will be an afternoon of delight and surprises. The setting before which she stands is not dull. It is a kitchen—and yet what a kitchen. There are miracles to be done with those pans and glasses and measures and glittering stoves and this smiling sorceress is going to evolve from the things before her such creations as would set to sighing every hungry man, woman and chick-a-biddy the wide world over.

There is only one doubt in the first-time visitor. Will she, the visitor, be able to perform the miracles she knows will be under way directly. Will she ever acquire that deftness and sureness, that calm certainty that exact results are to be expected? And then Mrs. Delaney begins to talk. It isn't exactly a talk, either. It is rather a chat, the brisk advice of the expert, the friendly suggestion of a neighbor all held together with a sparkling running comment and a host of practical suggestions.

Here's fun. Here's drama. But, most important of all, here is real information, real usable magic. Why, that complicated appearing cake is just play. That epicurean dream of a roast and its bright garnishments is no impossibility. She, the visitor, can make it. Crowded right into the fun the instructions and demonstrations have slipped their way.

The first-time visitor may know that Mrs. Delaney has an imposing array of knowledge, is further trained directly under Jessie M. DeBoth in the practical problems of housewives, and has passed on her training and experience to enthusiastic audiences throughout the country. That knowledge gives the visitor assurance that what she hears is scientifically correct. She'll find even more—she'll find this a truly "royal road to learning."

Who said the kitchen was dull, filled with thankless labor, worry and drudgery? Instead it can be—for there it is before her eyes—a work shop for creative art, a playground, a scientific laboratory filled with exciting possibilities. Cooking from being a necessity suddenly opens into a fascinating field for triumphs.

The duldest imagination can see the eyes of her family grow round with wonder if duplicates of those tempting dishes could be made at home, and conviction leaps from out of the fog of doubt as the session moves on its bright way. She, the visitor, can do it. It's easy. As easy as it is wonderful.

Mrs. Delaney of the DeBoth Home Makers' Schools will be in Bristol for an evening session starting Tuesday, November 4th, and there will be just one problem. Where to put all women of Bristol and vicinity who will want to see and hear her. That isn't guess work. That statement is based on the experience of the DeBoth lecturers throughout the country for years past. Reserve dates.

It is believed that the blaze was due to a cigarette spark falling between the upholstery.

At about six o'clock this morning Mrs. Leach glanced out of a rear window and saw smoke curling up over the garage. She investigated and found the machine ablaze on the inside.

Consolidated firemen were called and the fire extinguished before it reached the gasoline tank. Had the blaze not been discovered when it was it is more than likely that the car as well as the garage and other cars in the immediate vicinity would have been destroyed.

Twice Within Week Someone Has Tried to Fire Bromley Building

BLAZE DAMAGES AUTO

The second attempt to burn down a building on the rear of the property of Jesse Bromley, Linden street, was made this morning. The blaze was discovered by Chester Carson before it had made much headway. An alarm was sounded and Consolidated Firemen responded.

It was found that paper had been stuffed in between the joists of the building and then set afire.

An attempt to burn this same building was made about a week ago but the blaze was extinguished before it had gained much headway.

Fire early today burned the rear seat and damaged the upholstery in the sedan of Alvin Leach, 215 Wood street. For a time it was feared that the entire car would be destroyed.

Mr. Leach's son had the machine last night and when he returned home could not place it in the garage as the space was occupied by some tables placed there temporarily. The machine was closed and locked and left standing in front of the garage which is located at the rear of the property 215 Wood street.

At about six o'clock this morning Mrs. Leach glanced out of a rear window and saw smoke curling up over the garage. She investigated and found the machine ablaze on the inside.

Consolidated firemen were called and the fire extinguished before it reached the gasoline tank. Had the blaze not been discovered when it was it is more than likely that the car as well as the garage and other cars in the immediate vicinity would have been destroyed.

Hibernian Dance Was A Decided Success

The Halloween dance given by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in their hall on Corson street, Friday evening, was well patronized and proved a successful affair.

Most everyone present attended in costume and prizes were awarded to the fancy and comic dressed persons.

Mrs. Thiele, who was selected as being the best dressed person, received first prize; Miss Alice Gallagher, of Pine street, was awarded first prize for comic dress and Mrs. Johnston Hetherington, of Buckley street, won second prize for comic dress.

The hall was beautifully decorated in the orange and black crepe paper streamers and corn-stalks, pumpkins, witches and cats were seen here and there about the room. On the piano was a lighted pumpkin.

A seven piece orchestra furnished music during the evening and dancing was enjoyed until one o'clock. Refreshments were also served. About one hundred and seventy-five persons attended the dance.

Miss Rago received many beautiful and useful gifts.

The guests who attended were from Bristol, Trenton and Ardmore.

HIHWAY PARADE BEING HELD TODAY

Forty-Two Miles of Improved Roads in Upper Bucks Being Dedicated

1,000 AUTOS IN LINE

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 28.—The biggest public function the "upper North Penn Valley" has ever witnessed will take place today when forty-two miles of improved roads in upper-Bucks county will be formally dedicated with a parade of 1,000 automobiles carrying the leading citizens of the towns and communities through which the roads pass.

The ceremony will start at 1 o'clock in Perkasie. Service clubs, farmers' clubs and Granges have planned the event that will end with an ox roast held at Keller's Church community grove.

The leading speaker will be Colonel Samuel C. Wetherill, president of the Tri-State Planning Federation; State Senator Clarence J. Buckman, Langhorne, and a number of others.

The ceremony today is sponsored by the Upper Bucks County Improvement Association. The parade will assemble on the Ridge Road west of Sellersville at 2:30 and proceed to Sellersville, Perkasie, Dublin, Quakertown, Richlandtown, Springtown, Pleasant Valley to Durham. The parade will then lead to Springtown and by the way of the Harrow road to Harrow, from which place the route will lead to Keller's Church by the way of Ridge Road.

State Assemblymen Wilson L. Yeakel, of Perkasie, and Dr. Albertson W. Haines, of Bristol; Judge Hiram J. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer, and the Bucks County Commissioners will be in the line of parade.

The cost of improvement of the roads dedicated today amounted to about $1,500,000. The new concrete road from Kulp's Corner to Quakertown, "a short cut from Doylestown to Quakertown," cost approximately $375,000 and is about 7 miles long.

Ridge Road has been improved for fifteen miles. The improved area from Durham to Springtown covers eight miles. The improved road from Perkasie to the Ridge Road and the Granview Hospital road covers about two miles and the road from Harrow to Bethlehem covers a large mileage.

Lectures Youthful Lads For Damaging Property

Five youthful lads were summoned to the Municipal Building here last night to answer to the charge of malicious mischief at a bungalow at Edgely.

The boys were given a severe lecture by Attorney Howard I. James who impressed them with the fact that the damaging of property in this section must stop.

The youngsters admitted they had broken many panes of glass out of the windows of a bungalow on what is known as the Lane property at Edgely.

Each lad promised not to do it again and to make this promise good, each one took Mr. James's right hand on the promise.

Damaging of property in Bristol and vicinity is reaching a serious stage and property owners here are determined that it must cease. Many of them plan court action against the guilty parties.

NOW WE'RE TO EAT IT

While millions in other less favored lands beg for white bread or look upon it as food fit only for kings and millionaires, millers and bakers in the United States talk of teaching the American people to eat white bread again. It is discovered that in the midst of plenty the people have turned away from the "staff of life."

Half the population looks askance at a bread and potato diet because it has been told that these foods are fattening. And a large part of the other half is accepting only brown bread, or rye bread or whole-wheat bread.

If they can win the people back to the dietary habits of their fathers, the millers and bakers will end their own business troubles, provide a market for 130,000,000 bushels of the country's surplus wheat, furnish a place to spread that surplus butter and help the stock raisers and packers by increasing the consumption of meat sandwiches.

White bread is a nourishing and palatable food, besides being the cheapest of the staples. Eminent physicians and food experts say there is no better means of sustenance than good white bread made from American wheat.

Would the consumption of bread have fallen the way it has had the bakers been able to deliver to the home steaming-hot bread like mother used to make?

BEN'S LITERARY START

"A Dissertation on Liberty and Necessity, Pleasure and Pain."

That pamphlet Benjamin Franklin in his youth gloried in the writing and in his maturity repented it as a youthful indiscretion.

It is reprinted today to cause certain settled minds to lament that Franklin's repentant bonfire had missed one copy, and to give to another type of mind some such a thrill as its author must have experienced in writing it. Franklin's changing attitudes toward his dissertation reflected his changing attitude toward life as he grew older and the difference between the expanding mind and the fixed mind of all ages.

The young Franklin must have been a typical young man, unafraid before the profoundest problems of the universe and quite disrespectful to tradition and authority. He is one of the precedents for the fresh and fervent ideas of modern young iconoclasts.

Franklin's recovery in later life from his intellectual growing pains to supplant them with humility and tolerance did not prove his early opinions wrong. His "erratum" was not in possessing them but in impatiently parading them before older heads.

It is a part of wisdom for youth to be tolerant of the out-worn idea of older generations without accepting them as "truth."

The dance given by St. Charles Roman Catholic Church was a huge success and proved to be quite profitable. Mrs. Arthur Wilkinson, wife of the superintendent of the Presbyterian Sunday School, is confined to her bed as the result of a fall from a ladder which left many minor injuries.

The dance at the P. O. S. of A. was splendid from all reports of those who attended.

Don't forget the Cornwells Methodist Episcopal Church sour kraut supper to be given on the evening of November 5th, at the church hall, on Bristol Pike.

John Mortimer, of Hulmeville and Street roads, is having his new chicken coop wired with all the modern lighting equipment necessary to make it a happy ideal.

Carry Simons, of Philadelphia, and formerly a resident of Cornwells Heights, died recently.

On Thursday evening the Cornwells M. E. Church will hold a Halloween party in the church hall. Admission is free and everyone is welcome to attend the function.

Cornwells Fire Company, No. 1, will hold its regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening.

The Gray Line hosiery mill, of Street road, Eddington, steps forward into the realm of modern invention with the purchase of a combination legger and footer knitting machine. This machine is the first of its kind to be installed in any hosiery mill in the country. Heretofore, legging and footing was done on separate machines.

However, with the advent of this new invention it is made possible to do the whole process of legging and footing in one operation. Eddington is stepping with such an invention in its midst.

Keep in mind that the Eddington Improvement Association will give a dance at the P. O. S. of A. hall, Bristol Pike, Cornwells, on the evening of Friday, October 31st. Prizes will be awarded for the fanciest, most comical, and most original dress, on man, woman or child.

John Cantwell, of Eddington, is on the sick list and we hope for his recovery soon.

Coming to these parts in a short time will be one of the most interesting shows of the season, which will be given by the E. I. A. It is the bigger and better E. I. A. minstrel. Work will begin on rehearsals immediately after the dance has been straightened out on Friday night.

road above him and was waving to the blue car which was coming rapidly down the road.

It was useless to go after her, and he might be mistaken in thinking this meeting between the girl and Jack of so much significance, but even as he thought this he caught sight of a bag set down in the shade of the sycamore. Why a bag, unless it meant she was going to leave the island and her father once and for all?

With a quick exclamation, Sir George picked up the bag and went hurriedly back over the bridge. He meant to get a car and go after her. He could not let the girl go, now. This was probably her last chance—and his. He must overtake her, and he hoped devoutly that the thought of her father might still make her willing to return.

He went into the garage and, surprised at his own haste, took the first car that stood ready. Only when he had gone out on the road did he realize that it was Ray Brown's car that he had commandeered. Well, Ray would probably forgive him. It was now or never, if he was to stop Jack and the girl.

He had seen from the garage that the girl had come back to look for her bag. He had even laughed at the thought of how she would scowl when she found it gone. Well, he would go after her and bring her back by hook or crook to Robert MacBeth. Nicaragua Jack wasn't the son-in-law for that stout fellow.

As he clattered over the bridge the first drop of rain fell.

CHAPTER XII

On the terrace, Robert MacBeth sat with Ray Brown. "Anything wrong with you, Ray?" he asked in his most fatherly manner. "You've been splendid and backed me up tremendously, but I'm not a hog. Now that the girls have come, take an hour or so off, and leave the old man to his pipe and his book. You have earned a rest."

"Thanks very much for the leave of absence, Boss, but I'm not taking any. The only girl that I'd care to spend an hour or so with has just gone up the river road, hell-for-leather, with a strange young man."

"Well, take your car and go after her," advised Robert MacBeth, smiling. "Where's your adventurous spirit?" Ray looked at him a little thoughtfully before he spoke. "It's Roberta," he said finally. "If Roberta showed you that she didn't want you hanging around, I don't think you'd run after her."

"No," her father answered thoughtfully. "I should say not." Then, after a little pause, he asked: "Who's the man with her?"

"I don't know," and in spite of himself Brown's voice sounded a little uneasy. He stole a side glance at his employer. "Another reason why I'm not following is that Sir George is chasing them, going for all he is worth, in my car."

Robert MacBeth laughed. "Took your car, did he? Well, who'd have thought it. I would have gambled on you as the first to follow."

Ray again regarded MacBeth solemnly. How much did the old man know, he wondered? Well, anyway, it was not his place to alarm or enlighten him. Roberta had made that plain to him a day or so ago. She had told him with the feeling that truth was the kindest thing, that she was not for him. But he must reassure the Boss. "I don't know. When it comes to being the actual, reckless Johnny-on-the-spot did you ever see the best of Beauty Sandison?"

Robert MacBeth nodded with enthusiasm. "It's the way with the old Scots stock. Can't turn them away, once they've made up their mind to anything. Roberta's been hitting Sir George over the head every time his hat showed above the long grass. Yet, see how he comes back." He paused abruptly and as abruptly said to Brown: "Think I can leave him to handle it, Ray?"

Ray started. "Handle what?" "The situation and the strange young man?" Robert MacBeth asked it a little anxiously.

"Oh, surely," Ray told him with more confidence than he felt. It looked to him very black that Roberta had gone off this way without consulting her father.

"Hello! Let me get you indoors, sir. It looks as though one of the best little thunderstorms in the history of the country was about to break."

The young people, driven indoors by the coming storm, at once missed Roberta and as promptly discovered that Sir George was also absent.

"Gone out with Sir George," Ray heard Robert MacBeth explain.

Lady Sandison was still terrified by the sudden storms that swept devastatingly up over the river and the island. "I do hope the lad will not get wet."

"How about Roberta?" one of the girls asked mischievously. "Aren't you anxious about her?"

"Not me. Fine Roberta knows how to look after herself."

But that was just what Roberta was discovering she did not know. With all her boasted independence she could have cried aloud for the safety of her father's house, as she sped up the river with Jack and without her bag. Jack had refused to wait until she went back for it.

"You have enough money, haven't you?" he asked. "We can buy what you need when we get to town. You ought not to have left the bag behind."

It was not very diplomatic, but he was tremendously irritated, and he had been so accustomed to laying down the law to elderly widows and spinsters, who admired his masculine authority, that he forgot Roberta was not used to such a tone from him. "You're not making yourself particularly agreeable," she told him shortly. "What's to hinder my getting out and going back if I want to?"

"This," said Jack, and he put his arm about her, his cheek against hers and shot the car ahead at sixty miles an hour.

Sir George, far behind them, saw their car disappearing from his view. Ray's little machine would never outdistance it, and he must stop for petrol at the next station. He put on as much speed as was safe on the narrow road and with this storm coming, and watched the car ahead of his slowly draw away. He must stop them this side of the next bridge, if possible, before they crossed over to Jersey. It would be too easy for Jack to leave him far behind once he had crossed the state line and the bridge.

Sir George wondered, even as he jockeyed his car and gained a little more headway, whether Jack would take the next bridge. It was an old-fashioned wooden covered bridge, one of the few left in the countryside.

He also wondered if Roberta had any suspicion that he was following her. Sweat broke out on his brow as he thought of that possibility. An open and public clash between Roberta and himself was something he quite frankly dreaded, and yet if it must come it must. Of course, Jack must mean to marry her, he thought with a sick feeling of disgust. The idea of Roberta tied for life to that tricky mongrel was more than Sir George could bear.

Then the storm broke. The rain came down in torrents. Cars ran hastily into public garages and indeed into any kind of shelter they could get. Travel was impossible for most people, but he kept steadily on, though necessarily slowly. Just as he was thinking that now surely he would lose the blue car, he suddenly caught a glimpse of it in the procession ahead. It was making toward the covered bridge.

He lost the car again and edged his way gingerly out of the procession. He at once discovered why he had not seen it. Roberta and Jack were the center of an excited and jabbering crowd. Jack had crushed the mudguards of a dilapidated machine belonging to a family of voluble Polish-Americans out for their Sunday excursion. Jack was hurriedly taking their names and addresses and giving them his own. From the expression on Roberta's face Sir George wondered whether the name Jack had just given was the one with which Roberta was familiar.

They were so deeply engrossed in the accident that no one paid any attention to him, as he worked his way around on the outside of the group and made for the covered bridge. He did not go at once to the bridge entrance. He drew up where he could watch the crowd about Jack, without attracting Jack's attention.

The storm raged. Fortunately Ray Brown's car was not an open car and, in comparative comfort, Sir George settled himself and lit a cigarette, waiting for the moment when Jack would move. At present he felt he could do nothing that would make Roberta's escapade public property. Jack's temper was growing edgy, he could tell by his insolent attitude and his snarling voice, which occasionally carried above the roar of the storm.

The rain saved him, for the Polish-Americans hastily piled into their car, and the spectators scattered to seek shelter. Suddenly Jack's car shot past

Sir George. It was raining too hard to go at that rate of speed, he decided, anywhere except on the covered bridge. Evidently Jack had this idea too, for he swung around, narrowly missing Sir George. Jack was paying no heed whatever to the bridge rules and regulations, which culled for a speed of only ten miles an hour. Jack's infringement of the rules annoyed Sir George, who had planned to stop him in the middle of the bridge and have it out in comparative seclusion.

Roberta was having her first active misgivings. Surely Jack had conducted the negotiations with the owner of the dilapidated car in an unnecessarily harsh manner. She simply could not imagine her father, or even arrogant Sir George, speaking to those people in the way Jack had spoken, or giving them his name in such a fashion as to make it almost impossible for them to get it correctly. Then his sudden and abrupt way of giving in to all they asked, with a snarl, and dashing away. She had not time to wonder any more, for she caught a glimpse of Sir George as she looked back.

"Jack!" she screamed out, so that he might hear her above the roar of the thunder, the reverberation of their swift progress along the loosely fitted boards of the old bridge, the rain and the, to her, almost audible crack of lightning. "We're being followed."

Jack swore. It was a simply disgusting oath Roberta told herself. She might be too modern to be shocked at a little profanity, but he simply should not say such things. She would see that he never said that again. But Sir George! What earthly right had he to follow?

Sir George, only too anxious to answer that question, was following as closely behind them as Jack's speed permitted.

The old bridge, one of the few ancient wooden covered bridges left thereabouts, was a long bridge, crossing the river at its widest. The quaint wagon-shedlike structure had windows at equal distances all the way across. These old covered bridges were delightful places in which to cool off in summer time, with their narrow windows showing every now and then the beautiful river and the equally beautiful shores. In a rain such as today's the bridge was a long, dim, dark tunnel, lit by occasional flashes of lightning. The noise of the rain on the wooden roof was terrific. Sir George, with a sinking heart, remembered his small supply of petrol as he increased his speed slightly so that he might not lose sight of Jack. He would save for the last spurt and stop Jack at the other side of the bridge just before he reached the highway.

Jack's plan was, of course, directly opposite. He meant to drive beyond the required regulations while he was on the bridge, and when he reached the entrance he intended to go flying at top speed up the hill to the broad highway that led to the New York road. He had forgotten, what his pursuer suddenly remembered with a relieved sigh, that there was a toll gate and a toll man at the other end of the bridge, and there the cars would have to stop while toll was paid.

Sir George, remembering this, relaxed. He could surely stop them at the gate, for Roberta would hardly care to stage a public scene. She might even be glad to come back with him. If she was not, then it was a thing to be settled between Jack and himself. Sir George rather hoped Roberta would not want to come with him at once, so that he might have that excuse to give Jack the beating that he richly deserved.

Then it happened. Suddenly, as it seemed instantly, after

PERSONAL NEWS NOTES

The second fatal burning in two days occurred Saturday at Perkasié and resulted in the death Sunday of Miss Casmera Buchis, 23, a maid at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lauer. The girl died in the Grand View Hospital at Sellersville.

While other members of the household were absent Saturday afternoon, Miss Buchis, who came to America three months ago from her home in Lithuania, poured a can of gasoline on a wood and coal fire in the heater of the house in an effort to stir up the fire.

The can of gasoline exploded as the young woman was in the act of tossing it on the live coals and burning wood. She ran out of the house into a strong wind that aided the flames in quickly covering her clothes. She tried to extinguish the flames with water that was in a barrel outside the house, but the fire spread so quickly that it rendered the girl helpless.

Her screams were heard by people working in a field nearby, but by the time help reached her the girl had toppled over unconscious on the barrel. She was taken to the Grand View Hospital where she regained consciousness before her death long enough to direct her own funeral arrangements. She died Sunday morning.

Leaders of child welfare work in Bucks County conferred with Miss Elsie H. Lawrence, of Philadelphia, assistant secretary, Child Welfare Division, Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania, regarding plans for a state-wide conference for the "Launching of a Ten-Year Program for Pennsylvania's Children," to be held at Harrisburg on December 3-4. The local group was composed of Miss Watson, of the Bucks County Children's Aid Society; Miss Elizabeth P. Ross, of the Doylestown Branch of the American Red Cross; Miss Laura C. Haines, of the Bucks County Mothers' Assistance Fund; Mrs. Thomas Ross, of the Bucks County League of Women Voters, and Mrs. William R. Mercer who is deeply interested in child welfare. They were called together for the purpose of discussing plans with Miss Lawrence, at the home of Miss Jane Watson.

The state-wide convention marks the culmination of two years of effort on the part of family and child welfare organizations throughout the State in building a comprehensive social work program for dependent, neglected, delinquent, and handicapped children. Local round table groups in Bucks and other counties have played an important part in working out the program.

CHALFONT, Oct. 28.—Tearing down farm fences and erecting them across the highways so that traffic will be blocked is the latest prank committed by a group of boys in this vicinity and nearby who are known by the State Police.

Unless this mischief ceases the officers will arrest the youths, it was stated today at the Doylestown sub-station of State Police.

Sunday night the officers found that several fences along the highway between Chalfont and Line Lexington had been torn down and erected across the road at three different places.

In one instance a truck crashed through the fence and was thrown off the highway.

Coroner John J. Sweeney, M. D., of Doylestown, was summoned to Perkasié after the body of William Oscar Maugle, 55, had been found in an alley between Market and Chestnut streets.

Missing since Sunday afternoon, when he disappeared from his home about 4 o'clock, after he told his wife, Ida, that he was going out for a walk, the body of the deceased was found shortly before 6 o'clock this morning near an old shed, by William Wenhold, of Perkasié, who was on his way to work.

When Maugle did not return home last night police here and in nearby towns joined in a search for him. He had never before stayed away from home overnight.

When his body was found this morning there was no sign of foul play. It is believed that Maugle died from some illness late yesterday afternoon while on his way home.

Mrs. Maugle stated this morning, contrary to reports heard here, that her husband did not suffer from heart attacks. She is at a loss to account for the cause of his death, other than the fact that he had complained last Saturday of not feeling well.

The deceased, who is survived by his widow and three brothers, Nelson, Perkasié; Charles, Quakertown, and Milton, Richlandtown, was employed at times as a laborer by Charles M. Meredith, Quakertown publisher, at his home here.

THE SHORE

HOUSE H-108

America, which should have been the birth place of the Modern style lags far behind Europe in awakening to the possibilities it offers. The steel skeleton skyscraper is an American invention as is also the airplane, the machine gun and numerous other devices. Europe has a rich heritage in historic styles, America has not. Therefore it would seem that America offers the suitable background for the development of a new Architectural style—the Modern. New materials, new methods, a progressive spirit and money are at our elbow. We should outstrip Europe. Yet, on the other continent we find buildings of glass and metal where we still use wood. They gain the benefits of sunshine and outdoor living where we crouch ourselves in dingy interiors behind "antique" glass. We fuss around geese, we and gingerbread, sit in uncomfortable "Period" chairs and try to tune ourselves in with a Medieval atmosphere, when what we really want is "Liberty"—freedom for archaic restraint, rules and regulations and the opportunity to do as we please. This means simple, Modern surroundings with large comfortable chairs, windows of size to let in the sunshine and to admit of expansive views, good, simple decorations and furnishings—all in all, an appropriate and distinctive place to live in.

The Shore is such a house and provides for outdoor living. The porch roof is glass and metal. It lists thus—Cellar (under living room, kitchen and bed rooms)—laundry, heater and general space, cold room.

First Floor—Living room, kitchen, three bed rooms, a large glass and metal roofed porch and a one car motor room.

Deck—The entire top of the house serves as a roof garden deck.

Ceiling Heights—Cellar, seven feet; first floor, eight feet, six inches.

Exposure—The plans as shown are for a lot facing South or West. For a lot facing North or East the plans should be reversed.

Lot Size—House frontage, 42 feet; side clearance, left, 2 feet; right, 6 feet; lot frontage, minimum 50 feet.

Construction—Hollow tile with stucco finish; decks, canvas; porch roof, glass and metal; foundation, concrete; windows, metal casements with integral screens; doors, wood, to special details.

Interiors—Floors, linoleum; walls and ceilings, plaster; kitchen, composition tile; bath room, composition tile; steam heat, gas and electric wiring.

Cubiture: 27,984 cu. ft.

Approximate cost: $12,300.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house are available for a nominal sum. Address the Building Editor and refer to House H-108.

"That Government of the People
By the People for the People
Shall Not Perish"

SHALL THE PHILADELPHIA ORGANIZATION RULE THIS STATE?

The Philadelphia Vare Organization has for years been a byword for political corruption.

It has almost bankrupted Philadelphia, and for next year the tax rate in that city will be raised—according to the City Controller, more than 25 per cent.

In the absence of William S. Vare, Charles B. Hall dominates the Philadelphia Organization. They ran their own candidate for Governor in the Republican primary, announcing that the purpose of that candidacy was to procure a much larger share of the State's money for projects controlled by Hall, Vare and the Philadelphia Organization.

Defeated in the primary, they attempted to steal the Republican nomination. Defeated again by the Supreme Court, they now turn to a Democrat in their efforts to control the Government of this Commonwealth and the State Treasury, with its accumulating surplus.

Their excuse for bolting the head of the Republican ticket is that Gifford Pinchot is not a good enough Republican for them. Hence they urge their followers to vote for a Democrat.

NO MAN WHO HAS BEEN A REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR OF THIS STATE CAN BE SUCCESSFULLY CHALLENGED AS TO HIS REPUBLICANISM

The Hall-Vare Organization has stepped out of the Republican Party into an alliance with John M. Hemphill. The particulars of the deal between the Hall-Vare Organization and Hemphill may not be known, but no informed citizen believes that Hall and Vare are for Hemphill unless Hemphill is for Hall and Vare.

For eight consecutive years, under Pinchot and Fisher, Pennsylvania has been administered honestly, efficiently and economically in the interest of all the citizens.

If Hall and the Vare Organization get control of the State, where is the money coming from to meet their promised raids upon the Treasury? It can only come from more State taxes.

There is only one safeguard for the citizens of this Commonwealth—

VOTE THE STRAIGHT REPUBLICAN TICKET

women of the State who are identified with industry, with labor organizations, and other organizations which come in contact with both labor and industry.

"As I have previously announced, I decided to secure this co-operation through the formation of a committee of citizens, who would study the conditions and present to me, immediately after my inauguration, a program of suggestions.

"It has given me great pleasure to announce the names of those who have patriotically consented to perform these labors. I am confident that they will put into the work all possible zeal and energy and that we shall evolve a plan which will greatly minimize, if not entirely wipe out, the present serious condition of unemployment.

"These men and women have volunteered to do this work without any compensation whatever, and for that reason alone they are entitled to the heartiest thanks of every citizen of Pennsylvania. I give them mine in the fullest measure.

"One thing which especially pleases me in the composition of this committee is that it is made up of citizens who have a thorough understanding both of the problems of the laborer and of those of the employer or labor; that some of them, because of their official positions in our two largest cities, have come directly in contact with the conditions which we aim to correct, and that all of them have a heartfelt wish to be successful in their endeavors.

"It is probable that others may later be added to the committee.

"In asking these men and women to accept membership on the committee, I sent to each a letter in which I said:

"Unemployment has now become our most immediate problem. No class gains from it; all classes lose by it.

"Unemployment creates fear. The workers can never breathe easily so long as this menace hangs over them. No State can really be prosperous when a large percentage of its citizens are unemployed. Our own State of Pennsylvania should not be the last to grapple with this problem — it should be among the first.

"I am asking you, therefore, as part of the plan for a Greater Pennsylvania, to serve as a member of a committee to report to me not later than January 1 next on how the amount of unemployment may be reduced and how the condition of the unemployed and their families may be alleviated. I want the specific advice of the committee as to what I as Governor can do, what the Legislature of Pennsylvania can do, and what all men and women of good-will can do in this matter.

"I suggest that the following subjects among others deserve your attention.

"1. Seasonal Fluctuations in Demand for Work. Seasonal irregularities of demand create much unemployment. Despite this fact several hundred employers, including many in our own State, have been fairly successful in regularizing their production and consequently their employment. I should like to have you consider the methods they have used, including attempts to change consumers' demands, to produce for stock under planned and budgeted schedules, to develop side lines, and to make working hours more flexible. The employers of Pennsylvania are peculiarly concerned with this phase of the problem.

"2. Employment Agencies. The practice of the private employment agencies and the relative efficiency of public agencies are here involved. Your recommendations toward enabling workers to find such work as is open more easily and more economically are especially desired. The present chaotic methods should give way to better and less wasteful means of bringing workers and jobs together.

"3. Unemployment Due to Changes in Markets and Manufacturing Methods. We cannot turn back the clock of progress, but we can see to it that the innocent shall suffer as little as possible because of the forward march of society. I ask you to consider whether our school system should be re-directed to make young men and women industrially more flexible in a changing world, and how displaced adults can be retrained for other jobs. In particular, I would like you to report on whether other industries can be introduced in certain of the soft and hard coal areas of the State, and on how the farmers can be protected against their present hardships.

"4. A Planned Program of Public Work. Should such a program include not only the Federal Government and the State, but the municipalities and counties as well? Can it be speeded up as private business falls off? If so, how should such a program be laid out and administered in Pennsylvania?

"5. Stabilization of Incomes during Periods of Unemployment. It is highly improbable that unemployment can be entirely eliminated in the predictable future. Therefore, stabilization is necessary to protect families against want and to furnish that purchasing power which is needed to keep industrial establishments running which otherwise would be closed. I ask you to consider this also.

"There are many other features of this question which will command your attention.

"In conclusion let me say how much I shall appreciate your public spirit if you consent to serve. To remove insecurity from the lives of the workers and from industry as a whole is one of the greatest and most fundamental tasks of modern civilization."

"Most of those who have accepted places on the committee have already begun to study the situation individually, and within the near future we shall have a conference after which real progress may be expected to begin."

Dyer Children Hosts At Hallowe'en Party

Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley and pale pink roses. The wedding service was read by her father, the Rev. Dr. Charles E.
